A History of the Sports Hall of Fame

The Concordia University Sports Hall of Fame took root in the spring of 1967 when the Loyola College Sports Hall of Fame came into being to honour student athletes and builders of Loyola College.
There were ten inductees in the first ceremony which took place on October 21, 1967. Other inductions took place in 1968, 1969, 1970, 1972, 1973 and 1983.

In 1995 the Hall of Fame was renamed the Concordia Sports Hall of Fame and the mandate was expanded to include those individuals and teams who have made outstanding contributions to sports at Concordia University and Sir George Williams University, as well as Loyola College.

Nominations can be submitted by anyone with an interest in athletics at Concordia or its two founding institutions. Inductees are named by the Hall of Fame Committee which is composed of an ex officio secretary named by the Concordia University Director of the Department of Recreation and Athletics and six voting members as follows:

- A member of the Loyola Hall of Fame
- A representative of the Sir George Williams Hall of Fame
- A representative of the Concordia University Hall of Fame
- A female staff member of the Department of Athletics
- A male staff member of the Department of Athletics
- he Director of the Department of Recreation and Athletics

1962 LOYOLA FOOTBALL TEAM

Inducted in 1998 as a Team
Institution: Loyola
In 1962 there was an extraordinary event in the university's long and storied football history. On a cold Saturday afternoon, a determined team of Loyola Warriors defeated the Carleton Ravens 39-24 to win the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Football Conference (OSLC) championship.

In the days leading up to the big showdown, the Ottawa press had suggested that the smaller and less athletic Loyola Warriors need not show up for the game. As far as they were concerned, a Carleton victory was a foregone conclusion. By halftime, the Warriors were trailing 17-7, and the newspaper reports appeared to be accurate.

The sole Loyola major came on a 70-yard pass-and-run play from Mike Kostin and George Poirier.

It was a catastrophic start, but the stage was set for one of the greatest comebacks in university football history. Two second-half touchdowns by fullback Peter Howlett and a second major by Poirier enabled Loyola to take command of the game. Touchdowns by Kostin and Peter Shea capped a 26-point fourth quarter. All the while, the stubborn Loyola defence held the mighty Ravens to one second half score and History was Made.

For the first time in many years this team has turned out to be the powerhouse in the OSL."

1967-1968 LOYOLA MEN'S HOCKEY TEAM

Inducted in 2002 as a Team

Spirited, skilled and masterful is perhaps the most accurate way to describe the 1967-68 Loyola Warriors Men's hockey team. Under the direction of rookie head coach Dave Draper, this fun-loving group was the first Loyola Warrior hockey team to reach the national championships - and a historic journey it was. The team finished the season with a 15-1 win-loss record, which was the best in the country, better than 38 other schools. The Warriors defeated their archrival, the Sir George Williams Georgians, in the playoffs to win the Ottawa-St. Lawrence championship. Then it was on the nationals where the team drew the Toronto Varsity Blues in the first game. The Varsity Blues were considered the best team in the nation and were the two-time defending university champions. Cast in the underdog's role, Loyola was afforded no respect and no chance to win. But Draper and the Warriors went down in the history books as giant-slayers. A Mike Griffiths' goal, in double overtime, gave Loyola a 1-0 victory and a berth in the gold medal game. Unfortunately, the Alberta Golden Bears scored with 17 seconds left to play, skating away with a 5-4 victory and the gold medal. But the heart-wrenching loss couldn't diminish the accomplishments of the magical season.

1968 LOYOLA FOOTBALL TEAM

Inducted in 2006 as a Team

In 1968 when George Dixon took over as head coach of the Loyola Warriors football program, the Loyola of Montreal Athletic Program came out with an article examining the enormity of this challenge. It was titled "Football: Nowhere To Go But Up". The author reported that "Dixon never took on a tougher job." It went on to point out the new coach had inherited an 0-10 team with the worst record in Canada and the worst record in Loyola football history.

Dixon was undaunted and implemented a plan that saw his team post a perfect 6-0 win-loss record and win the Eastern Division of the Central Canada Intercollegiate Football Conference. That year Loyola was the only undefeated team in the country. In six games they scored 201 points while allowing just 18. And only 10 of those points were scored on the impenetrable defence.

The Warriors travelled to Waterloo, Ont. to meet the CCIFC Western Division champions - the 5-1 Waterloo Lutheran Golden Hawks. On Nov. 9, 1968 in the light drizzle at Seagram Stadium the spectacular journey came to an end as the Golden Hawks downed the Warriors 40-0. Waterloo-Lutheran went on to win the Atlantic Bowl before losing in the national championship game.

Coach Dixon emphasized that football should be fun. He also preached the fundamentals - keep things simple he liked to say. In 1968, his Warriors were simply the best.

1968-1969 MEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM

Inducted in 2019 as a Team
Institution: Loyola

The program had something to prove when the members gathered for the season. They were still feeling the sting from the previous season that saw the young Warriors win 14 consecutive games only to lose the conference championship by one point.

Loyola rolled through the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Athletic Association conference, compiling a perfect 15-0 win-loss record. The Warriors hosted the league playoffs and made quick work of Macdonald College by a score of 96-70 in the semifinals. The following day they defeated RMC 71-44 in the final.

The Warriors earned a berth at the CIAU national championship tournament in Waterloo, Ont. On March 6, John McAuliffe scored 26 points and Peter Phipps had 19 to lead the team to a 72-62 victory over Alberta in the quarterfinals. The following day Loyola met Waterloo Lutheran in the semifinal and lost 71-63. Earl Lewis had 19 points and McAuliffe chipped in with 18. On the last day, Daigneault's team rallied and defeated Alberta once again. The final score 76-62 and it earned the Warriors a bronze medal. This would prove to be the only medal the Loyola basketball team would win in six trips to the national championship.

That season also saw other impressive accomplishments. The Warriors won the Coupe de Quebec, with a 93-82 victory over McGill University at Loyola's carnival game that wrapped up the title.

Another highlight was the 111-109 OT win over Plattsburgh at the 93rd annual Malone Winter Carnival.

Finally, Loyola earned six of the 10 all-star honours from the OSLAA. Forwards John McAuliffe, Earl Lewis and Jack Contos, along with guard Peter Phipps were on the first team. Jim Ivy and Tom Profenno, both guards, were named to the second team.

1972 LOYOLA FOOTBALL TEAM

Inducted in 2004 as a Team
Institution: Loyola
The 1972 Loyola Warriors Football team was a young group that surprised everyone with an impressive campaign culminating in a historic national semifinal appearance.

After struggling through preseason losses to the Carleton Ravens and Saint Mary's Huskies, the critics were harsh. But the Warriors rolled through the regular season with a 5-1 win-loss record, including a 46-28 victory over the McGill Redmen. According to the Loyola News, this marked the first time a Loyola football team had ever beaten McGill.

In the QUAA championship game, Loyola defeated the Macdonald Clansmen 50-6 to earn a berth in the Prairie Bowl, a national semifinal game versus the University of Alberta Bears in Edmonton on Nov. 18. Despite a valiant effort, the Warriors lost 58-6 to the bigger, stronger Alberta Bears on a day that dawned cold and gray. Initially it was a fierce battle that saw Alberta eke out a 14-3 lead at halftime. Loyola narrowed the score to 14-6 in the third quarter, but the Bears eventually took over the momentum of the game.

In writing about the 1972 Loyola Warriors' accomplishments, a Loyola News columnist credited this team with moving football out of the dark shadows of hockey and pronounced it could no longer be viewed as a secondary sport.

The 1973 Loyola Warriors men's soccer team brought great honor to the college and the local soccer community by becoming the first Quebec institution to win a national championship. On Sunday, November 11, Loyola defeated the Alberta Golden Bears 4-3 in the final of the championship tournament, which was played at Memorial University in St. John's, Newfoundland. At the end of regulation time, neither team had scored. The overtime period came to a close with the teams deadlocked at 1-1. Next they went to penalty kicks to decide the game. Jim Corsi, Martin Sosnowski and Tony Madiou scored for the Warriors, while Alberta could only muster two goals. En route to the national championship, coach Harry Hus's team compiled a perfect 10-0 win-loss record and extended the Warriors' unbeaten streak in league play to 50 games.

The 1973-'74 Loyola Tommies women's hockey team captured the Quebec University Athletic Association (QUAA) championship with a 4-1 victory over McGill. The team posted a perfect 6-0 win-loss record in the conference regular season and outscored its opponents 66-0. Marjorie Ross was the leading scorer in the league with nine goals and 11 assists in the six games.

The Tommies won the seventh annual Loyola Invitational Women's Hockey Tournament with an 11-0 victory over Brown University and an 8-1 win over York University. It marked the first time Loyola had won its own tournament. A Loyola News reporter remarked that the Tommies' outstanding play that weekend ranked, "as the greatest single moment in women's sports at Loyola." The accomplished team wrapped up its impressive campaign by winning the championship trophy at the Brown tournament. Despite having to play two games in one day, the Tommies defeated Cornell University 7-1 and Colby College 8-1.

Overall Loyola posted a 19-6 record which included play in the Montreal Hockey League. The impressive record and the play of goaltender Janet Norman captured the attention of Sports Illustrated. The respected publication wrote of the team record and Norman's nine shutouts in its popular Faces in the Crowd feature on March 11, 1974.

1974-1975 LOYOLA MEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM

The very last team in the Loyola College men's basketball tradition was one of its best. The 1974-75 Warriors were quick and mobile - the quintessential running team. They were a little flashy but also gutsy. Head coach Doug Daigneault told reporters his team was prepared to "claw and scratch" its way to victory in every game. He also praised the team for its intelligence and maturity, saying this group had the best attitude of any team he'd coached.

In Quebec conference play, the Warriors finished in second place with a 13-2 record. They dominated every team in the Quebec conference except the Sir George Williams Georgians who were their perennial antagonists. After a 109-79 semifinal victory over the McGill Redmen, Loyola was ready for the Georgians in the QUAA championship game. The Warriors had waited a year to avenge their 1974 playoff loss to Sir George, and on March 1 they were rewarded. The Warriors defeated the Georgians 72-61 in the QUAA title game, advancing to the CIAU championship for the fourth time in six years. They had a 32-29 halftime lead, and except for one brief surge when the Georgians took a momentary 45-44 lead, Loyola controlled the game.

The CIAU national championship was in Waterloo, Ont. March 7-9. The Warriors opened with an 83-69 quarterfinal loss to the Acadia Axeman and then lost the consolation semifinal 73-72 to the Ottawa Gee-Gees.

Nevertheless it was a memorable season with many highlights. The Warriors won the Ottawa Gee-Gees Invitational Tournament, averaging 105 points a game. Travelling in the Maritimes, Loyola defeated the No. 2-ranked Saint Mary's Huskies 76-71, proving the team could play with the best in the country.

Head coach Doug Daigneault collected his 200th career victory. There were three QUAA all-stars in Jan Erglis, Ron Puskarich and John Dore. Erglis was also a second team all-Canadian.
